CAMPAIGN WINDS UP HERE

Vote for These Two

For Governor of Arkansas

J. Marion Futrell

For Attorney General

Carl E. Bailey

"With My Usual Contempt"

Editorial by Alex. H. Washburn

On Tuesday the people of Arkansas will go to the polls to elect, among others, a governor and an attorney general.

Two years ago this newspaper supported Futrell to overturn the Parnell-Blackwood administration which, aside from the highway debt, was plunging the state into an enormous deficit on running expenses.

At the same time we strenuously urged the defeat of Hal Norwood, then running for his third consecutive term (fifth in all) as attorney general. And to that end we supported Boyd Cypert, former prosecuting attorney of Little Rock.

The New Deal for Arkansas state government was successful as regards the governorship.

But Norwood, splitting the field with "dummy" candidates (there was no runoff primary law in 1932), evaded his judgment day and crawled through to re-election on 34 per cent of the total vote.

Where we stood in 1932 we stand today—Futrell for governor, and anybody on earth to beat Norwood.

X X X

On Saturday, August 4, we reviewed at length the charges on the record against Hal Norwood—the fact that he paid lawyers thousands of dollars to carry state deposit dividend checks from one office building to another—the fact that after the State Highway Commission had authorized 3 million dollars worth of overpayments on cost-plus contracts under authority of an opinion from the attorney's general's office the Arkansas Supreme Court said of that opinion: "By no stretch of the imagination could such contracts be held to be within the law which provides for state force work."

Ten days have elapsed since that publication—but instead of answering the charges on the record the attorney general has written a personal and abusive letter regarding this editor, beginning "I read your false and sloppy editorial" and ending "I am, with my usual contempt for you, yours truly "

He distributed this letter all over Arkansas in pamphlet form, and he published it again this morning in the Arkansas Gazette as an advertisement.

Instead of answering the charges against him regarding the taxpayers' money Hal Norwood accuses me and other Arkansas newspaper editors of "selling out" to Carl Bailey, his opponent.

Two wrongs, says the proverb, don't make a right.

If all the newspaper editors of Arkansas had really sold out to Bailey it would still leave Hal Norwood before the bar of public opinion on a dozen unanswered charges of legal conspiracy and squandered tax money.

And yet, Hal Norwood has done me too much honor.

Kings have sold their country out, cabinet officers have bartered away oil reserves for a bribe in a black satchel—but it remains for the Attorney General of Arkansas to accuse a country news-

Wartime Control of Food Supplies to Follow Drouth

1935 Crop Regulation Will Be Drastically Revised

ENCOURAGE WHEAT

Probably Will Expand Cotton Also to 35 Million Acres

WASHINGTON. — (AP) — President Roosevelt in conferences on the drouth Monday ordered federal purchase of any foodstuffs which might otherwise go to waste and laid down an emphatic ultimatum against politics in the relief administration.

He authorized Aubrey Williams, assistant Federal Relief Administrator, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to draft a plan for the government purchase of hays and fruits in small quantities which might not otherwise be harvested.

Williams emphasiled that this was primarily to afford relief for small growers. He said there was no concern over a possible food shortage.

Wartime Control

WASHINGTON.-(AP)—Planning wartime vigilance over the nation's food and feed supplies next fall and winter, the Farm Administration also is preparing drastic revisions of its 1935 crop control programs.

Official government estimates are for the lowest crop production in more than 30 years because of continued drouth. Therefore, the AAA has undertaken a day-today watch over conditions and is starting an inventory of the food and feed supply which will form the basis for guiding its work during the coming year.

Next year's wheat plan is, likely to call for the same acreage planted during the years 1927-32, rather than a 15 per cent reduction from that figure. Necessity for this move grew from the prospective cut in the carryover from this year's excessive figure of 270,000,000 bushels to about the normal of 125,000,000 bushels.

Cotton Carryover Cut

Cotton production, limited this year to 25,000,000 acres under the voluntary control plan and to 10,460,251 bales under the Bankhead act, probably will be extended in 1935 to allow production on 32,000,000 to 35,000,000 acres. This year's large carryover of 13,000,000 bales is expected to be cut to about the normal level of 5,000,000 next year as a result of the prospective short 1934 crop of 9,195,000.

The program for corn and hogs still is to be considered. Final decision will hinge largely on the report of the feed and forage situation showing supplies available in comparison with the livestock population it must support.

Over a period of years, according to Secretary Wallace, the number of hogs tends to balance with the supply of corn. The administration will seek to maintain this ratio.

The 1935 tobacco program awaits drafting after 1934 sales, which will show how far the former excessive surplus has been reduced. Indicated production this year is 1,043,000,000 pounds, about 200,000,000 pounds less than normal consumption requirements.

To Adjust Curtailments

Minor curtailment programs for rice, cling peaches, walnuts, and a variety of other crops will be adjusted by the respective control committees automatically according to demand to maintain prices at a fair level, officials said.

To eliminate much detailed work involved in administering separate contracts for each crop the administration is still hopeful of drafting a single contract which will bring the

Graves to Speak on KTHS at 10 Monday

Governor Futrell's campaign will be closed at 10 o'clock Monday night with a radio addrehs over KTHS, Hot Springs, by O. A. Graves, of Hope, campaign manager for the governor.

Mr. Graves has been at Little Rock the last three weeks, maintaining headquarters for the governor at the New Capital hotel, and making speeches throughout the state.

Football Men to Meet on Monday

Coach Hammons Issues First Call for 7 p. m. at City Hall

Coach Foy H. Hammons, new high school football coach, Monday issued a call to candidates for the 1934 Bobcat team to meet with him at 7 o'clock Monday night in the city hall.

The former Pine Bluff High School mentor who produced a national championship football claimant at Pine Bluff, will deliver a 30-minute talk in which training regulations will be the main topic.

"I want my men to be getting in shape now for the intensive grind that's going to start the first of September," Coach Hammons said.

With Little Rock, Fordyce, Hot Springs and other top-notchers on this season's schedule, Hammons will find opposition during his first year here just about as tough as it used to be in Pine Bluff.

However, prospects for an experienced and heavy squad are brighter than in several seasons.

Joe Palmer Held by Paducah Police

Raymond Hamilton's Pal Caught by Kentucky Officers

PADUKAH, Ky. —(AP)—Police announced Saturday night that a man arrested here Saturday at first believed to be Alvin Karpis, Bremer kidnaping suspect, has been identified as Joe Palmer, one of the two men who fled in a sensational escape from the Texas prison death house at Huntsville three weeks ago.

Palmer with two companions, Raymond Hamilton and Blackie Thompson, are regarded as the three most dtsperate killers in the Southwest. They escaped in a daring break in which one convict was killed, two others wounded and a guard shot.

Chief of Detectives Kelley Franklin said the identification was positive. Until tonight he had continued to hold to the belieff that hs prsoner was Karps, wanted n the kdnapng of Edward G. Bremer n St. Paul and n two kllngs.

James A. (Boss) Patterson, Texas penitentiary guard goes on trial at Huntsville for aiding the three desperadoes to escape July 22. The three, eluding the gunfire of guards mowed down three other prisoners, escaped over the prison walls into three waiting automobiles.

Palmer and Hamilton were convicted of murdering Major Crowsos, Eastman prison guard, and were awaiting execution. Hamilton and Thompson have not been recaptured.

Truck Driver to Be Put on Trial

Dyersburg (Tenn.) Man Faces Charges in Malvern Murder

LITTLE ROCK.—Herbert Pierce, of Dyersburg, Tenn., driver of a truck which collided with a light sedan occupied by A. B. Cook, 50, of Malvern, on the Little Rock-Hot Springs highway Saturday night, which caused the death of Mr. Cook, will be given a preliminary hearing before a justice of the peace at Benton Monday.

He is under technical arrest on a charge of manslaughter, Coroner J. P. Sims of Saline county said Sunday night.

The accident occurred near Collegeville, about seven miles north of Benton, shortly before 10 p. m. Pierce was driving a truck owned by W. E. Garrett of Dyersburg. He was accompanied by a relief driver, Ike Campbell, also of Dyersburg. Mr. Garrett was in another truck several miles nearer Little Rock, and did not know of the accident until he reached here. He returned to Benton immediately.

Pierce was still in a hospital at Benton Sunday night, suffering from a broken arm and lacerations. However, it was said that he would be able to attend the hearing Monday. His relief driver escaped with minor injuries. Both were loaded with cotton gin equipment.

KLAGENFURT, Austria.—(AP)—Don Gonzalo, 19-year-old prince of Spain and fourth son of Alfonso, former king of Spain, died Monday of his family malady of hemophilia or skin-bleeding.

It was caused by an automobile accident.

The prince was injured Sunday night while returning from Klagenfurt to his exile home with his sister, the Infanta Beatriz. The Infanta was driving their car wden she swerved into a brick wall to avoid striking a bicyclist.

Hemophilia is a constitutional disease, almost always hereditary, characterized by a tendency to uncontrollable hemorrhage from slight wounds or even spontaneously.

Situation Eases Up for Louisiana

Registration Books Close for Election Next Month

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Mayor Walmsley's Old Regular political leaders Monday began checking the election rolls in the city registration office held by Senator Long's National Guardsmen.

Each precinct was checked to determine if legally-registered voters had been scratched and thus disqualified for voting in the September congressional primary.

Although Long said previously nearly 25,000 names had been scratched, Walter B. Hamlin, chairman of the registration law committee of the Old Regulars, said less than 5,000 had been taken from the rolls and 85 per cent of that number had been restored.

Meanwhile, seven district assessors appointed by the Louisiana Tax Commission to replace the assessors elected on Walmssley's ticket in the January primary, opened offices Monday and began rewriting assessments.

Situation Eases Up

NEW ORLEANS, —(AP)— Leaders of the Long-Walmsley politiial war maintained their unyielding attitude Sunday and the fatcional dispute over iontrol of civic affairs headed back toward civil courts, whih thus far have been powerless to do anything about the state of partial martial law prevailing in the downtown ity hall area.

At his home in uptown New Orleans Political Dictator Huey P. Long, surrounded by his always considerable estourage, declined to discuss war against Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley's city machine which stripped the Long faction of patronage in New Orleans last January by defeating Long's personally selected ticket in the municipal electios.

Mayor Walmsley stood on his statement of Saturday that no armistict was possible until Long called off the militia which he mobilized at Jackson Barracks two weeks ago and which seized the city voting registeration office in advance of the Congressional primary September 11.

Regulations for Walmsley's police force of 1,400 men, all armed wiht riot guns since the militia entered the city, were slightly relaxed, however, ostensibly because of the continued hot weatther. The force, which has been kept on an emergency 12-hour shift since open hostilities were threatened, was informed it might go back os an eight-hour day tomorrow.

The city police maintained strict guard on the city hall against posible seizure. Long's militia walked sentry duty inside the registeration office where the books were closed Saturday, 30 days ahead of the primary in which the city will be called upon to elect two congressmen and other offiials from rival Losg-Walmsley slates. By agreement, Walmsley watchers sat inside the registeration office, awaiting Monday when Long-appointed registrar of voters R. J. Gregory has promised to furnish them a look at the books and the last number of each precinct's registeration, eliminatisg possibility of any additions before the primary.

Miss Evass, the winner, will leave this coming Saturday for Little Rock to meet the other winners and entrain at midnight for Hollywood.

Farmer Slain and Five Are Arrested

Ill Feeling Results in Fatal Beating Near Morrilton

MORRILTON, Ark —(AP)— John Lillie, 57, farmer of the Springfield community, 15 miles north of here, died in a hospital here early Sunday morning from injuries alleged to have been sustained in an attack.

Cecil Harmon, 22, his half-brother, Franklin Harmon, 28, both of Martinsville and Orville Griffin, 20, of near Plumerville, are held in connection with Lillie's death. Rufus Lucas, 23 of Martinsville, was at liberty under bond in connection with the farmer's death.

Cecil Harmon said he, Griffin and Lucas accompanied Franklin Harmon to a pasture to feed some hogs Friday. Lillie appeared, he said, and threw a stone which struck Griffin on the head. Cecil said he then took Lillie's gun and broke it.

Officers said that when Lillie was found at his home, the man was suffering from a severe beating and was unconscious.

Ill feeling was said to have existed previously between Lillie and Franklin Harmon.

Augustus Thomas, Playwright, Dies

Author of "Arizona" Dies of Apoplexy at Ripe Age of 77

NEW YORK.—(AP)—Augustus Thomas, 77, dean of American playwrights, died of a stroke of apoplexy at the suburban Clarkstown Country Club Sunday.

He had been in failing health for the past three years. Mrs. Thomas was with him at the end.

Known principally for his historical plays of the American scene, the veteran writer became for three years 1922 to 1925, the director of all elements of the theatrical producing industry, a position comparable to that of Will H. Hays in the motion picture business.

An outspoken wet, Mr. Thomas launched an anti-prohibition play, entitled "Still Waters" in 1928.

For the past year he had lived in virtual retirement in Westchester county near the home of a son.

Playgoers remembered him first for his "In Mioura," (1893) in which Nat Goodwin starred and his "Ariona," (1900) which raised Western melodrama to the plane of dramatic art. Mr. Thomas' "Alabama," a romantic drama of Civil war, written in 1890, was regarded as the first American pastoral play.

A native of St. Louis, and the son of a theatrical director, Mr. Thomas began writing for an amateur company at the age o f16. Earlier, after a public school education, he served successively as a page in the Missouri legislature and in the House at Washington. He also checked in a railroad office, studied law and was active in labor organiations. Then he became associated with St. Louis and Kansas City newspapers.

Mediators Fail in Truck Strike

They Begin Work All Over Again Monday—Terms Rejected

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.-(AP)—Efforts to settle the truck drivers' strike having failed again, federal mediators started all over Monday in their quest fo rpeace terms acceptable to employers and employes alike.

Objections to the reinstatement provisio for the strikers were a primary factor in inspiring the rejection of last week's proposition, said Vincent Dunne and Farrel Dobbs, leaders of the strikers.

State Campaign Ends

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)— Candidates for state, district and county office in the Democratic primary election Tuesday prepared to bring their campaigns to a whirlwind finjsh Monday afternoon and night in a final drive for votes.

Of principal interest was the governor's race, putting J. Marion Futrell of Paragould, incumbent, against Howard Reed, former state comptroller.

Futrell closes his campaign with a speech at Blytheville Monday night, while Reed closes his with a North Little Rock rally the same night.

Byrd Is Reached by Tractor Party

Admiral Found Safe Though Haggard After Lonesome Vigil

LITTLE AMERICA, Antartica—Delayed)—(AP)—(Via Mackay Radio)—A three-mas tractor party, after two unsuccessful attempts, Sunday reached the advance weather base across the Ross sea and found Admiral Byrd waiting for them.

Thin and weak and with long shaggy hair after nearly five months of isolated existence, Admiral Byrd mounted the hatch of his shack, sunk in ssowdrifts, to greet the men from Little America.

"Hello fellows," he said. "Come on down and get warm. I have some hot soup for you."

For three days Dr. Richard C. Poulter and two other members of the expedition have struggled across the dark immensity of the ice barrier in a tractor hauling three sledges. Two previous attempts to reach Admiral Byrd were halted, one by storms that covered up the trail and another by mechanical difficulties.

It is 123 miles by trail to Bolling advance weather base, where on March 28, Admiral Byrd saw another human face for the last time. The route taken by Dr. Poulter to find the location again was believed to have been even longer.

The light on the 12-foot aneometer pole which Admiral Byrd had hung and kept burning for days as beacon for the tractor party was still burning.

Admiral Byrd had several days' growth of beard os his face and showed signs of weariness and physical depletion, but Dr. Poulter reported by radio that the admiral was calm, "even calmer than we are."

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

X-Rays Direct Doctors in Cure of Bronchitis

Not infrequently, after a person has had a severe cold or repeated severe colds, he develops chronic inflammation of the mucous membrane which lines ahe walls of the tubes that carry air from the windpope in the throat to the smalest parts of the cells of the lungs. These tubes are called bronchi and any inflammation of them is called bronchitis.

The chief and worst symptom of bronchitis is continued cough. With this cough there is a large amount of sputum, so that the condition is sometimes mistaken for tuberculosis. There are, of course, such syfptoms as slight fever and sometimes pain in the chest.

The condition has been known for many years and has usually been treated by putting a mustard plaster on the chest, by inhaling all sorts of vapors, and by taking cod liver oil and other substances which help to to build up the nutrition generally.

It has also been considered good treatment for the patient to go for a while to a warm dry climate, but this type of climatic treatment is not usually available to any but tde well-to-do.

With development of new kinds of apparatus, however, it has now become possible not only to look directly at the walls of the bronchi, and to see the kinds of inflammation that have taken place, but also to make X-ray pictures of the bronchi and to apply treatment directly to the walls that are inflamed.

It has been found that the injection of iodized oils into the tubes does not harm the health generally and permits the taking of X-ray pictures which completely outlines the tubes. These pictures enable the doctor to see whether there is thickening of the walls or of the tissues around the walls.

After the direct and X-ray studies have been made, it is best, first, to eliminate every possible focus of infection in the mouth and in the throat, since inflammation in the bronchial tubes may be related to infection elsewhere.

It has been found that injection of the iodized oil for purpose of X-ray, in some cases, has relieved the symptoms for various periods of time. Therefore, many physicians now inject such oils or other soothing substances directly into the bronchial tubes and in this way ameliorate the trouble.

Effects of such injections continue for at least 24 hours, during which the cough is much less and the amount of sputum greatly reduced; sometimes the improvement lasts for weeks or many months.

The method, as you can see, is one which must be applied by a docter. You simply can't inject drugs directly into your own bronchial tubes, because the passing of the syringe, for the injection, into the throat is accomplished by gagging and coughing. Therefore, it must be suitably controlled by use of local anesthetics, and a good technic in handling the device.

Calls Morgan Raid Part of Great Plot —Writer Bares "Copperhead" Scheme in Civil War

By BRUCE CATTON

They still frighten children down in the Ohio river country with the name of John Hunt Morgan. This Confederate cavalry leader, who led his brigade on a raid up through Indiana and Ohio in the summer of 1863, achieved one of the most sensational stunts of the Civil War and scared the good burglars of the Ohio valley worse than Lee himself did.

Now he finds a biographer, and a good one, in Howard Swiggett, whose 'The Rebel Raider' 'subjects his career to an intelligent analysis.

Morgan's famous raid, says Mr. Swiggett, looks like wasted effort, from a military viewpoint. But back of it, he believes—and he assembles a lot of facts to support his theory—there was a far-reaching design on the part of the government at Richmond which made it a political, rather than military, adventure.

This design, as Mr. Swiggett sees it, was simply this: To provide a rallying point fo rthe great Copperhead conspiracy in the northwestern states, help the malcontents in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois seize their state governments, pull those states out of the war entirely and thus bring southern victory.

The scheme failed, he believes, because the Copperhead leaders were better at talk than at action. When the crucial moment came, they simply couldn't produce.

Morgan's men alienated their sympathies, too, by their unrestrained conduct, Mr. Swiggett adds. They got jittery, and the great plan for a northern rebellion fell flat.

This makes a very readable biography, and it gives an interesting new slant on the subterranean politics of the Civil War. Published by Bobbs-Merrill, it sells for $3.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Child Artists Need Wall as Canvas

Many a landlord nearly has apoplexy when he goes to show prospective tenants a vacant house and discovers the walls, newly papered only a few months ago, bedecked with curlycues and crosses, rakish animals and characters that would stump authorities on the Rosetta Stone.

Lead pencil, drayon and halk have traced designs at random wherever the young artist felt moved to draw.

Out of doors the landloard tears his hair over the recently new paint on the garage doors. A nail has proven better than chalk. Scorings and cartoons here, too.

"It's an outrage," he sputters. "I'd have saved money if I'd let the house go empty. That kid has cost me more than a hundred dollars."

Furniture Suffers, Too

If the irate landlord could follow the furniture of his former tenants, almost certainly he would find table tops scratched with pins and other evidences of destruction. The child at the age when he must express himself by hand is no respetor of surfaces. Unless his mother also expresses herself by hand on the proper surface or lays down the law otherwise, he can ruin too much to justify his "self training."

So what?

Every child loves to see something his own hand has made. When he scribbles, it isn't the color or form that interests him so much as the fact that his chubby hand can produce at all.

Beginnings Are Crude

At first it may be a dot or a long, scraggly line without reason. Then gradually plan enters ento the design. He tries to "will" his hand to represent what his mind is thinking. When he says "See the kitty!" the first time, you may have to admire a nondescript smudge. After a bit the idea of a leg or two may manifest itself, or a tail. This does not mean that even if he tries often enough he will even be able to draw a recognizable cat. Artistry is almost, if not quite, a born gift.

But trying to co-ordinate a hand with the will to create is a really good idea. Finger prowess, hand control, the mind cooking up an idea and laying it on paper, is one more step toward cleverness.

Big Paper Helps

Wall paper ,tabletops, garage doors? No indeed. That must be understood from the start.

Great sheets of plain white roll paper fastened to the wall of his room by sharp thumb tacks that do not mar, will make an excellent drawing surface. They can be replaced. Little black boards help but they are too often "soul hampering" to the young Angelo who wants to tackle murals.

And, incidentally, one mother buys six yards of wide store paper to run down the stairway. It can be replaced when streaked or spotted by small hands.

One of the handiest things about the house where there are children is a storekeeper's "roll" of paper. It need not be fine but it should be light in color.

and district directors were named Sunday to inject impetus into the Federal Housing Administration's campaign to modernize millions of homes and commercial buildings.

James A. Moffett, Housing administrator, told reporters he did not "look for any general reduction whatever" in prices of building materials.

"There has been the general impression," Moffett said, "that to start the campaign a bargain price might be named. With few exceptions, I believe prices are reasonable and generally below the 1926 level."

SYLVIA RIVERS, richest girl in town, is giving a party at the Yacht Club and Boots is heartbroken because she is not invited. She accepts a last-minute invitation to a dinner to be given the same night as Sylvia's party by MRS. WATERMAN, one of Larchneck's social arbiters.

Boots overhears her crowd laughing about her acceptance of the dinner invitation and is crushed by this unkindness. That night at the Yacht Club she meets HARDY WHITMORE, one of Sylvia's guests, and he urges her to come for a ride in his sailboat.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IV

AT Sylvia's table the glasses were filled and emptied and filled again. Great red roses in a crystal vase drooped in the heat and smoke and scattered their petals on the white cloth. Food cooled on the plates while girl and boy laughed, talked, danced and wandered back again.

Meanwhile, Hardy's absence did not go unnoticed. Patty's sharp eyes instantly caught it. Isabel was conscious of his departure and Sylvia herself, although apparently ignoring it, was perfectly aware of his defalcation.

One of the boys, with the male's delicious usual obtuseness, inquired casually, "Where's Hardy got to?" Isabel pressed her small slipper against his instep, signaling for silence.

It did not matter, really, Isabel said to herself, annoyedly. There were more than enough men to go around. Why did they always have to kowtow to Sylvia—save her feelings? She would not admit, even privately, the hold that Sylvia had on the crowd. Sylvia's parties, Sylvia's money and her big car and the orchids that she wore so unconsciously, impressed them. Some of them were in her debt, in a way, and had to curry favors. Laddie's father worked for Mr. Rivers and when Patty's allowance fell short it was Sylvia who came forward, Isabel happened to know, and paid for luncheon tips, trips into the city, even silk stockings sometimes.

"As for me, I don't owe her anything," Isabel reflected, with satisfaction. Ah, but didn't she, really? Sylvia had made her accept that black chiffon dress, when they were in the play together. Isabel had borrowed it to play Mrs. Hustings, in "Not for a Day," up at the high school, and later Sylvia had said, with apparent carelessness: "I want you to keep it. No, but really, I mean it."

Isabel had been tempted beyond her strength. The black chiffon had made her creamy skin look creamier; it had brought out every single glint in her copper-colored hair. It was the sophisticated sort of frock young girls dream about and their mothers refuse to buy for them.

So she had kept it. And she had found, after that, it was not so easy to be simple and natural with Sylvia. It was easier to fall in with her mood, play up to her, bite back the contradictions that rose to one's lips when Sylvia made one of her cool, outrageous, extravagant pronouncements.

SYLVIA had not been able to buy Boots—had not, in very truth, tried. No, from the instant they had met, between the two girls it had been war—to the knife. And now (Isabel thought) Boots was committing the crowning crime of all, walking off with Sylvia's man.

"This party's died on its feet," Sylvia announced, suddenly in a silence. "Let's do something. How about Henry's?"

Suddenly the girl heard her name called in the silence. "Isabel! Isabel!"

They gathered up their things; Sylvia's white and silver bag, her frothy wrap, Patty's compact, Isabel's lipstick. It was late, Isabel thought. The older women had begun to look tired. And Boots Raeburn was not at Mrs. Waterman's table. Oh, well—

Just as Isabel skirted the musicians' dais, a shout went up out of doors. One of the men who always hung around the club—not exactly an attendant, just one of the "regulars" in blue jeans and a battered cap, went running down the pier. Isabel heard the words, "Man overboard." She ran, too. Everybody, it seemed, was on the pier at once: hatless girls in frail frocks, men in dinner clothes, their eyes searching the black horizon.

"Young fools!" she heard a white-haired, moustached man say, angrily. Then someone cried, "They've got him," and the words ran from mouth to mouth. Hardy . . . it was Hardy . . . and everyone knew he was a whiz with a sailboat. What could have happened? The night was calm, the sound was running smooth as black glass.

Isabel's heart began to beat very fast. She was fond of Boots—always had been. What if anything had happened to Boots?

She had lost the others now: Sylvia and Patty and Laddie were nowhere to be seen. She tried to see over the shoulders of a tall man just in front of her and failed. Isabel was thoroughly frightened now. She pushed her way through the crowd, back toward the clubhouse. Some of the younger people were making a great joke of the whole thing.

"Well, if they will get sloshed!" she heard a high, giddy voice saying, merrily. Isabel was terribly angry. Imagine anyone making fun of anything so terribly serious.

BOOTS wasn't there. Oh, Isabel said to herself, wildly and despairingly—the worst had happened. Hardy had upset the boat. Boots, tangled in those fluttering skirts, had been lost. Boots was a fine swimmer, but you couldn't do much with a long dress wound around you. Foolish, foolish, unhappy Boots!

"I can't—can't bear it," Isabel sobbed soundlessly to herself, huddled against some hawthorn bushes in the bank of shrubbery surrounding the house.

Suddenly she heard her name called in the stillness. "Isabel! Isabel!"

She trembled all over. Was it true, then, that ghosts came back to haunt you?

"What?" she quavered bravely. "Who is it?" She peered into the blackness, unable to distinguish a thing.

"It's me—Boots," said the voice steadily. "I'm here in the summer house."

Isabel demolished the space between the shrubbery and the old, rustic, embowered summer house in two jumps. Yes, it was Boots Raeburn and not her ghost who sat huddled in the shadow.

"What on earth's the matter?" Isabel's teeth were chattering.

"There's such a racket down on the pier," Boots said in a fretful voice. "I didn't know what to do. I've lost my shoes—"

"Lost your shoes?" The full tide of relief flowed over Isabel. She reached out a tentative hand, gripping her friend's shoulder. "You're not—not wet," she said with apparent irrelevance.

"No, of course not. Why should I be? I can't think what's wrong with everyone tonight," Boots complained. "The whole world seems to have gone crazy or something. Everyone ranting and screaming down on the pier like a crowd of Fijis. . . ."

"Oh, Boots, darling!" Isabel laughed aloud, from sheer relief. "I thought . . . I was sure . . ."

"And now the thing is, I must get home—but how?" Boots demanded, unheeding. "That foolish boy! When I wouldn't go sailing with him he picked me up and ran and my shoes dropped off . . . and I got away from him and dashed and hid here. He went off in the boat by himself but I couldn't find my shoes anywhere and I guess I had a good cry—don't tell anyone I'm such a fool, Izzy darling, and I must have been asleep . . ."

THE relief of hearing her say the commonplace words, plaintively, complainingly, was exquisite. Isabel hugged her.

"Oh, Hardy's boat tipped over," she said, "and I thought you'd gone with him . . . my mind was just in a whirl . . ."

"I hope he's all right," Boots contributed, "although he did act terribly and I was frightened for a minute, and Mrs. Waterman will never forgive me, that's certain. I can't explain . . ."

"The thing now," Isabel said, "is to get you home. Oh, if I'd only brought the roadster! I wanted to, but Laddie offered to drive me . . ." She considered the situation a moment, her bright eyes thoughtful.

"Look," she offered, in the silence, "I'll tell Mrs. Waterman you were taken ill—that you went off to the dressing room and didn't feel equal to coming back. That crab-ment at supper," said Isabel viciously, "was enough to set anybody off."

"No, no, she'd never believe it," Boots said despondently. "It sounds silly. If I had my shoes I'd go in and explain to her myself—tell the whole story. But I can't go back in there like this."

Isabel shrugged her shoulders. "I s'pose you can't."

"Could you get Laddie or somebody and have him drive over into the curve and I'd make a dash for it?" Boots wanted to know.

"I'll drive Larry's car myself," Isabel decided. "He left the keys in it. He always does. I'll just run you home and come back later. Look, when I whistle you come. I'll have the engine running—"

Boots waited apprehensively in the darkness. The crowd on the veranda had thinned now. Attendants could be seen, moving about in the big lighted rooms, straightening chairs, clearing littered tables. The orchestra played "Home, Sweet Home."

Still Isabel did not come. Boots' head ached. She was desperately trying to fend off thoughts of the morrow—of her apologies to an angry and incredulous hostess; of the giggles which would be her portion if the story got around. But just now all she could afford to contemplate was the immediate problem. Once home, safe in her own room, she could plan for the future. . . .

There was a low whistle from the vicinity of the hydrangeas, glimmering palely in the darkness. Boots ran in that direction. The dewy grass was damp to the soles of her thin stockings. She glimpsed the roadster, heard the blessed sound of the purring motor, jumped in.

But it was not Isabel at the wheel. It was Russ Lund, the swimming instructor at the club.

Dream Leads Him to Missing Child

3-Year-Old Rescued After Searchers Thought Bear Ate Her

WINNIPEG, Canada —(AP)— Most of the searchers who set out last week to find mission three-year-old Florence Spence gave up hope when bear tracks were found in the vicinity of where the child mysteriously disappeared.

But not M. Blair, a diamond drill setter for the Mantcha mines close friend of Tom Spence, Indian trapper and father of the missing girl. Because of Blair, Florence was safe at home Sunday.

Blair had a dream. He said the dream directed him to as isolated spot in the brush tree miles from the child's home. He told searchers about it and they scoffed at him, but he quit his work and started out.

In less than an hour he was on his way back with Florence in his arms. He took hir to Dr. W.L. Falconer, who said her survival in the forest for five days, without food, was a miracle—not to mention the presence of bears in the region.

Florence was weak, but the doctor said she would completely recover in a few days.

Arkansas Flier Is Killed in Accident

Corning Man and Companion Die in Flames at Chicago Airport

CHICAGO— While their sweethearts watched in horror, two men were killed Sunday when their cabin plane crashed at Sky Harbor airport, north of Chicago.

The ship burst into flames as it struck the ground while making a landing. Both men were burned beyond recognition before rescuers and the Fire Department could approach near enough to the burning pyre to extinguish the flames.

The dead: Raymond Casson, 26, of Corning, Ark., pilot of the plane and a licensed transport pilot, and Louis Wastl, 22, of near Chicago, a boy's keeper.

Standing near the hangar waiting for the ship to land were Miss Marie Wastl, 21, sister of Louis, who said she was engaged to marry Casson, and Miss Carolyn Senn, 22, Wastl's sweetheart. Miss Wastl was waiting her turn to fly.

Get Rid of Malaria!

Banish Chills and Fever!

To conquer Malaria, you must do two things (1) Destroy the infection in the blood. (2) Build up the blood to overcome the effects and to fortify against further attack. There is one medicine that does these two things and that is Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic! The tasteless quinine in Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic destroys the malarial infection in the blood while the iron builds up the blood. Thousands of people have conquered Malaria with the aid of Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic. In addition to being a noted remedy for Malaria, it is also an excellent tonic of general use. Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all stores. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

George ARLISS in THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD

He defied his enemies to save a Nation!

DON'T miss this real picture treat of the year!

Did you give him a lift? He's a brother man,
And hearing about all the burdens he can.
Did you give him a smile? He was dowcast and blue,
And the smile would have helped him to battle it through.
Did you give him your hand? He was slipping down hill?
And the world, so I fancied, was using him ill.
Ddi you give him a word? Did you show him the road,
Or did you let him go on with his load?
Do you know what it means to be a loser in the fight
When a lift in time might set everything right?
Do you know what it means—just a clasp of the hand,
When a man's borne about all a man ought to stand?
Were you brother of his when tht time came of need?
Did you offer to help him, or didn't you heed? . . .Selected.

Gasoline Suffers Vapor Power Loss

Its Potency Varies From Day to Day, Tests Disclose

TROY, N. Y.—(AP)—A three-year study of service station gasoline, revealing that its "test" efficiency varies from week to week, even day to day, and from station to station, was made public Sunday at Walker Laboratory of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

The variations were found in the same brands of gasoline, from causes all or mostly outside the manufacturer's control, and due ot storage, delivery, weather and heredity of the gasoline. The study showed changes may be sufficiently great to affect car performance, but probably not enough for the average motorist to notice.

They disclosed new "kinks" in the gasoline problem and indicated that there has been a broad improvement in motor fuels, in that they increasly approximate the car needs for which they are made. The investigation was made by Dr. H. M. Faigenbaum, M. D. MacNaughton, H. D. Donovan, G. F. Hodgson and R. M. Beach.

It was explained that some of the gasoline escapes by evaporation, and the truant portion is the fast vaporizing stuff which affects the "test" rating.

"Gasoline," the report said, "is often stored and delivered several times before reaching the consumer. The sequence might be: Refinery, barge or tank car, distribution center, delivery truck, station tank. Storage and delivery occur at each of these points.

"Fro mthe standpoint of distilation range (high or ow test) the effect is to reduce the volatility. This is due to direct loss of the lighter portions, particularly in warm weather, since they are the easitest portion to votalize."

major crops and some feed and forage crops together.

Coupled with these plans also may be a crop lending program patterned after this year's corn loan plan which stored 256,532,000 bushels of corn on the farms of 142,368 borrowers and advanced them $120,647,500 on the security of the stored gain at the rate of 45 cents a bushel.

The entire administration from Secretary Wallace down is watching weather reports with increasing interest. Relief efforts continue with the total of cattle purchased in the drouth area having reached 2,623,000 head. Sheep purchases in Western range states are to begin late this week.

Shark oil in a bottle is used as a barometer by the natives of Bermuda; in good weather it is clear, but it turns milky with approach of a storm.

4 States Going to Polls on Tuesday

Ohio, Nebraska, Idaho and Arkansas Are Holding Elections

By the Associated Press

Ballots will answer lively political campaigns in four states Tuesday.

Senatorial contests hold the fore in Ohio and Nebraska primary elections; Idaho and Arkansas are interested in the choice of nominees for governor.

Bitter intra-party strife, particularly among the Democrats, has aroused Ohio voters. Governor George White, Congressman Charles West and Former Governor A. V. Donahey seek the Democratic nomination for the senate seat now occupied by Simeon D. Fess. Fess is opposed for the Republican nomination by two World war veterans—Walter B. Wanamaker of Akron and John M. Vorys of Columbus.

Nebraska Democrats pas son the question of "Bryan control" in choosing between Governor Charles W. Bryan, brother of the "Commoner," and Congressman E. R. Burke for the senatorial nomination. The faction headed by Arthur F. Mullen, former national Committeeman, is supporting Burke.

Nebraska Republicans have the choice of a candidate antagonistic to the "new deal,' 'such as Congressman Robert G. Simmons, or one less objectionable in Senator Gorge W. Norris.

In Idaho Governor C. Ben Ross, seeking his third term, is opposed for the Democratic nomination by Frank Martin, former state attorney general, and Asher B. Wilson. The Republican nominee will be one of three aspirants—Frank L. Stephan, Wesley Holden or H. F. Fait.

Closing of filings in Maryland showed Governor Albert C. Ritchie asking a fifth term, will have as his principal opponent Dr. Charles H. Conley of Frederick.

The new directors, the administrator said, were selected primarily for sales promotion activity. They will contact local communities through chambers of commerce, women'h and civic clubs to tell home owners how and why they should borrow for home modernization.

"It will be purely a local effort, steered by the directors," Moffett asserted.

Ten regions were established, including:

Number Five—Alabama, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee; Hugh Humphreys, Memphis, business man.

State directors included:

Arkansas—J. J. Harrison, Little Rock, head of an insurance organization and state director for the National Emergency council.

The exceptional popularity which Chevrolet has enjoyed for many years has naturally had its effect on Chevrolet prices. Large sales have enabled Chevrolet to maintain consistently low purchase prices, which were recently lowered even further. As a result Chevrolet now offers you the lowest priced six-cylinder automobile obtainable—a big, comfortable car with Fisher Body styling and refinement—safe, weatherproof, cable-controlled brakes—the smoothness and economy of a valve-in-head, six-cylinder engine—and typical Chevrolet dependability. In offering this car, and the Master models, at substantially lower prices, Chevrolet hopes to repay the motoring public in some measure, for consistently placing Chevrolet so high in public favor.

For State Auditor

J. OSCAR HUMPHREY

Candidate for Re-election

Throughout the most vital period in our state's history Oscar Humphrey has served the people of Arkansas faithfully in one of the most important offices of their Government.

Millions of dollars in vouchers have been audited, covering not only routine operations but extraordinary additional amounts in road construction and PWA funds—Not once has the voice of criticism been raised against the operation of this most important office.

On the basis of intelligent, conscientious service, your vote is solicited for Oscar Humphrey in his race for re-election—Compare his record with the mere claims of his opponents. Remember that more than 100,000 electors endorsed him in 1932; an even larger number will return him to the office this year.

Your Vote and Influence cordially solocited.

Candidate for Re-Election as Your

State Auditor

Storks Win Again Over Tiremen 12-6

Of Last 9 Games Hope Has Won 7, Tied One, and Lost One

The big bats of Manager Red McClendon's Storks boomed again Sunday afternoon for 14 hits that carried them to a dozen runs to defeat the Texarkana Tiremen at Pair Park, 12 to 6.

The Storks moved closer to top position in the Two States League as the Transporters, leaders of the circuit, were splitting a double bill with the tail-end Atlanta club.

In the last nine starts the Hope team has won seven, tied one and lost one.

Riley and Harrell with three hits out of four visits to the plate, led the Stork attack.

Kelly for Hope, gave up 11 hits, while the Storks knocked out Carr and Thompson. Wagoner finished on the mound for Texarkana.

The Storks had two big innings, scoring six runs in the fifth and four in the sixth. The final two came in the eighth inning.

The Transporters are next on the Stork schedule, the game to be played Thursday afternoon in Hope.

Boston Bids Babe Ruth "Farewell"

47,000 Fans Rise to Cheer Greatest Figure in Baseball

BOSTON, Mass. — (AP) — A record crowd of 46,766 bade farewell to Babe Ruth who made what he said was his last appearance as a regular player in Boston Sunday as the Red Sox and New York Yankees divided a doubleheader. The Sox won the first, 6 to 4, and the Yankees the second, 7 to 1.

The Babe played throughout the first game and seven and a half innings of the second. hWen he left the game the crowd, largest ever to attend an American League game here, arose and gave baseball's most colorful player a tremendous ovation. Twenty thousand other fans were turned away for lack of space. It was the Yankee's last appearance of the season in Boston.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 19

Referred to the People by the General Assembly in regular session assembled, 1933.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Arkansas and by the Senate of the State of Arkansas, a majority of all members elected to each House agreeing thereto:

That the following is hereby proposed as an Amendment to the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, and, upon being submitted to the electors of the State for approval or rejection at the next general election for Senators and Representatives, if a majority of the electors voting thereon, at such an election adopt such Amendment, the same shall become a part of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, to-wit:

That Article 5 of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas be amended by adding thereto the following:

SECTION 1. Not less than a majority of the members of each House of the General Assembly may enact a law.

SECTION II. None of the rates for property, excise, privilege or personal taxes, now levied shall be increased by the General Assembly except after the approval of the qualified electors voting thereon at an election, or in case of an emergency, by the votes of three-fourths of the members elected to each House of the General Assembly.

SECTION III. Excepting monies raised or collected for educational purposes, highway purposes, to pay Confederate pensions and the just debts of the State, the General Assembly is hereby prohibited from appropriating or expending more than the sum of Two and One-half Million Dollars for all purposes, for any biennial period; provided the limit herein fixed may be exceeded by the votes of three-fourths of the members elected to each House of the General Assembly.

SECTION IV. In making appropriations for any biennial period, the General Assembly shall first pass the General Appropriation Bill provided for in Section 30 of Article 5 of the Constitution, and no other appropriation bill may be enacted before that shall have been done.

SECTION V. No expense shall be incurred or authorized for either House except by a bill duly passed by both Houses and approved by the Governor.

The provisions of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas in conflict with this Amendment are hereby repealed insofar as they are in conflict herewith, and this Amendment shall be self-executing and shall take and have full effect immediately upon its adoption by the electors of the State.

The above resolution was filed in the office of the Secretary of State of the State of Arkansas on the 30th day of January, 1933.

Each elector may vote for, or against, the above proposed Amendment.

WITNESS MY HAND and Official seal of this office this the 28th day of March, 1934.

Walker Reclaims Old Title, Why Not Let Him Have It? Nobody Cares, Anyway

Badly bent financially, Mickey Walker and Jack Kearns are in San Francisco for what may be their concluding pugilistic stand—plugging the nickels, now, instead of the thousands of yore.

His heavyweight whirl ended by his knockout by Max Schmeling, and outslapped by Maxie Rosenbloom in a bid for the light-heavyweight leadership, Walker, at 33, is returning to the middle-weight division he once ruled in a final, desperate attempt to remain in the more important money, if any.

A defeat by the Fresno southpaw, Young Corbett III, on Aug. 14, would deprive Walker of the last semblance of bucks office appeal, and Kearns long since has lost his grip as a manager.

It is fitting, perhaps, that Kearns is taking his final fling out there at the end of the trail, where he started, and where he stumbled across the gold mine that was Jack Dempsey.

With his old flair for ballyhoo, Kearns brought in the chiquitous Bill Miller and his dictionary of similes to beat the drums.

So It Has Come to This

Miller's first act was reclaiming the 160-pound wreath for Walker, and to take a wide poll of sports editors to ascertain who has the best right to it—Walker, Vince Dundee, who fences with Teddy Yarosz in Pittsburgh on September 11, or Marcel Thil, the bald bomber of La Belle France.

It strikes me that Miller solved the problem whe nhe sent out his questionnaire. Any time a ballot has to be taken to determine a champion, there is none worthy of the name.

The 30-year-old Thil perhaps has the strongest claim, but ringworms would like to see him demonstrate hi ssupremacy outside of Paris.

Dundee, topped by Thil and twice repelled by Yarosz, made the left-hander, Lou Brouillard, look like the Missing Persons Bureau to gain the recognition of the New York Boxing Commission.

Yarosz, the only youngster of the lot, has a phenomenal record on paper, but hi sperformances outside of Fittsburgh at times have been rather unsatisfactory. The Pole is an awkward swinger, without a punch to bring the customers to the edge of their seats.

Good Fighters Too Few

Corbett, whose brief occupancy of the welterweight throne was terminated by Jimmy McLarin's first flurry of punches, is an awkward mauler who has been around for more than ten years.

Walker is the distance from San Francisco to Elizabeth, N. J., from what he was, but still may have enough left to put the breath of life into one of boxing's several gasping classes. But things certainly are in sorry shape when a division has to fall back on an old-timer like the Toy Bulldog.

Gorilla Jones, the Akron negro, might be able to whip them all, but who would care?

That is what is wrong with the beak-busting business. There are too few good fighters for the trade to tie to.

The inventor of shoe laces became a millionaire when he put his wits to work to find a better method than buttons for fastening shoes.

Since the Civil war only three presidents of the United States have been democrats.

The white race in htis country is increasing at the rate of 1630 per 100,000 population as compared to the black race's ratio of 1275 per 100,000.

The New Deal Needs Young Men

In one of the cleanest campaigns ever conducted by candidates asking for a public office in Hempstead county, the time is near at hand when you must choose between the two men who offer themselves for Hempstead's next County Clerk.

There can be no doubt as to the qualifications of the two candidates. Both are honest, efficient and reliable. Both can be relied on to handle the office in a way thoroughly satisfactory to the citizens of this county.

Therefore, why make any distinction between the two candidates.

Simply this:

Ray McDowell is a young man asking for his FIRST political job. County offices belong to all the people. Rotation in office is a long established principle of our government. Only by a continual change do we play fairly with the great number of younger men who are constantly arising to take the place of those before them. He will devote himself to the affairs of this office with the knowledge that the record he makes there will affect his entire business career ahead of him. He will step down at the expiration of his traditional term and leave the office open for some other man to follow.

Will You Risk Him With Another?

PAGE is serving A THIRD TERM and is drawing your hard-earned dollars for doing NOTHING. He has been been in public office SIXTEEN YEARS.

Misrepresentation and mud-slinging on the part of Earl Page vance agricultural and mining interests which the bulletin is intends is thoroughly borne out by the facts.

Mr. Page has served sixteen years in public office. He is now serving his third term as Commissioner of Mines, Manufacture and Agriculture, the abolishing of the office not becoming effective until January 1935. Mr. Page is today drawing salary from this office and will continue to do so far the remainder of this year.

When Mr. Page became your Commissioner of Mines, Manufacture and Agriculture, he immediately turned it into a political machine. The office of Commissioner of Mines, Manufacture and Agriculture was the farmer's office. It was practically the only department of the State Government from which the farmers could receive any direct benefits. However, when Mr. Page had held the office four years the Legislature, after an investigation as to its usefulness, abolished it. Not only did Mr. Page completely destroy the usefulness of the office but time and again he used the bulletin from that department to promote selfish political aspirations rather than to advance agriculture and mining interests which the bulletin is intended to serve.

And what further do we find? When the abolishing act becomes effective in January 1935, Arkansas, which is an agricultural state, will be the only State in the Union without a department of the State Government for the advancement of agriculture. Under whose management did this department become so useless that abolishment was necessary?

This record clearly demonstrates Mr. Page's inability and should convince any fair minded voter that he is not the proper person to entrust with the important duties of State Treasurer.

This is no time to place in the Treasurer's office a man who has demonstrated his inefficiency elsewhere.

What those in Authority Think of Tilman B. Parks

Quotation from letter of Hon. James A. Farley, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Postmaster General and closest friend to President Roosevelt, to Mr. Parks:

"As a member of the Administration of President Roosevelt, I want to extend my thanks to you for your unwavering support of the policies of the New Deal. I know your constituency will appreciate it, and recognize as we recognize, the esteem in which you are held.

"As a member of the appropriations committee, you were called upon time and again to decide questions of great import to the government. I predict greater influence for you as the years go by."

(Signed) James A. Farley, Chairman.

Quotation from letter of Hon. Henry T. Rainey, Speaker of the House of Representatives, with reference to Mr. Parks' record:

"He is a man of marked ability and has been intensely loyal to his constitutents and to his state, and in these critical times has proven a tower of strength back of the President. He has been assigned to the Appropriations Committee - perhaps the most important committee of all, and he ranks well up on the committee. He is one of the effective members of Congress and is listened to with respect and attention whenever he addresses the House. He is now a recognized leader in the House of Representatives and is consulted in important matters by the Speaker and the Majority Leader and his opinion is frequently sought and is always valued."

(Signed) Henry T. Rainey

Quotation from letter of Hon. J. B. Buchanan, Chairman of the Appropriations Committee:

"If a district has a representative in Congress who has deserved several terms and if such Representative is a person of honor and integrity and reasonable intelligence, such District makes a mistake to defeat him and send a new Representative in his place as it is only by long and faithful service that a Representative in Congress gains power, prestige and influence. Mr. Parks enjoys the reputation of being a man of honor and strict integrity with an ability far above the average Congressman."

Quotation from letter of C. S. Barrett, for twenty-five years President of the National Farmers Union, to Mr. Parks:

"It affords me considerable pleasure to add my personal appreciation to that of your many friends for the splendid manner in which you have always responded to the call of the farmer in distress. I would that we had many more in responsible positions equally capable and aggressive in fighting the battles of the common people."

(Signed) C. S. Barrett

Quotation from letter of Charles Q. Kelley, Department Commander of the American Legion of Arkansas:

"I want to take this opportunity of expressing to you the appreciation of the Legionnaires in the Arkansas Department for your support of the legislation designed to aid the presumptives and restore the pay status of war service-connected disability cases."

(Signed) Charles Q. Kelley

What the People of Hempstead County Know About Tilman B. Parks

FIRST: That he is straight. His honor has never been called in question.

SECOND: That he is fearless. This fact has been demonstrated not only by his record in Congress but by his previous record as Prosecuting Attorney.

THIRD: That he is a diligent and faithful public servant. This fact is known to all who had occasion to call upon him since he has been in Congress.

So, why take a chance on an untried and untested man at a time when this District is faced with the most critical condition in its entire history?
